Paul is a corporate and commercial advice specialist who draws from experiences as a business owner, private legal advisor and in-house counsel. Having worked with management teams over many years, Paul is valued for distilling issues down to what is really important and being prepared to make a call based on judgement and experience.

Paul acts for government and private clients and has specialist industry experience in technology and the digital economy, waste and the circular economy, asset maintenance, tendering and procurement. Paul also regularly advises large charities and not for profits on establishment, growth and expansion opportunities.

Before working in private practice, Paul spent almost a decade working for Telstra in technology contracting, product development, media and marketing.
